Relocate a House

How to get an awesome home really cheap.

Relocating a house will save you tens if not hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is an inexpensive way to enter the highly competitive and incredibly expensive Australian property market.

It is the property industries best kept secret and the newly launch House Relocation Marketplace will teach you how to relocate a house onto your land for as little as $100,000.

Founder, Simone Ferrier said “Australians work hard for their money and house relocation is a sensible financial option to stop paying rent and get into the housing market.”

“You can spend a minimal amount now, say as little as $100,000 to get a modest house relocated and ready to live in, in a matter of months.”

“You then have the potential to expand and update your home in the future, when life and financial circumstances allow.

“If done right, a budget house relocation has the potential to become a high-end home in the future. I always encourage those considering house relocation to spend only what they can afford and to live in the house and gradually renovate it over the years.”

It is one of the most inexpensive ways of getting your foot in the door of the housing market, and in all likelihood, your mortgage will be much smaller,” she said.

“Relocating a house for minimal spend usually involves retaining as much of the original structure and features as possible to minimize your costs. And you will also want to source budget-friendly fixtures and fittings, and undertaking only essential renovations.

The result will be a functional, livable house that may not have all the high-level upgrades of a premium renovation but still provides a comfortable living space that perfectly suits the needs of the homeowners,” said Simone.

Background

House relocation is one of the oldest forms of recycling. It was a favored option of lower to middle class families of the 1900's, when poor farming families would load up the family home and have it moved by horses, tractors, steam engines and trains to more fertile farming land.
